How much does a meter of 10 Gigabit fiber optic patch cord cost

Overview

10 meter 10Gb Aqua LC OM3 Duplex Fiber Optic Cable, 50/12510 gigabit rated OM3 fiber optic cable terminated with LC connectors featuring high quality cores.

Key Takeaways

Installing a 10 Gigabit fiber optic patch cord typically costs between $20 and $150 for the cord itself, with additional labor costs if professional installation is required.

Patch Cord Material Costs

A 10 Gigabit fiber optic patch cord is usually a pre-terminated fiber cable, often single-mode or multimode, depending on your network requirements. Prices vary based on length, fiber type, and connector type: Short multimode patch cords (1–3 meters): $20–$50 eachLonger multimode or single-mode cords (5–15 meters): $50–$100 eachHigh-quality single-mode cords with premium connectors: $100–$150 each Pre-terminated assemblies cost more than bulk cable because they are factory-terminated and tested for performance.

Installation Costs

If you hire a professional to install the patch cord, labor costs may apply: Indoor installation (within a rack or patch panel) is relatively simple and may cost $50–$150 per cord depending on technician rates and complexity. Outdoor or complex installations (requiring conduit, trenching, or splicing) can significantly increase costs, but for a single patch cord, this is usually unnecessary. Labor typically accounts for 60–80% of total installation costs in larger fiber projects, but for a single patch cord, the labor component is minimal unless it involves structured cabling or integration into a larger network.

Factors Affecting Cost

Fiber Type: Single-mode is slightly more expensive than multimode. Connector Type: LC, SC, or MPO connectors affect pricing. Length: Longer cords cost more due to material and testing.

Environment: Indoor vs. outdoor installation can influence labor costs. Quality and Testing: Factory-tested cords with low insertion loss are more expensive but ensure reliable 10 Gigabit performance.

Summary

For a typical 10 Gigabit fiber optic patch cord installation: Material cost: $20–$150 per cordProfessional installation (if needed): $50–$150Total estimated cost: $70–$300 per cord, depending on length, fiber type, and installation complexity. For small-scale or home network setups, many users install patch cords themselves, reducing costs to just the price of the cord.
