Galvanized steel offers a balance of durability and affordability, while pre-galvanized steel is cheaper but less corrosion-resistant.

Aluminum: $20–$50 per meter. Lightweight and corrosion-resistant, aluminum trays are ideal for outdoor or humid environments but are more expensive than steel. Stainless Steel: Higher-end pricing, often above $50 per meter, suitable for highly corrosive or hygienic environments such as food processing or coastal areas.

Factors Affecting Cost

Coatings and Finishes: Hot-dip galvanized (HDG) or powder-coated trays increase durability but add to the price. Tray Type and Design: Ladder trays are more expensive than perforated or solid-bottom trays due to higher load capacity. Installation Complexity: Labor, supports, brackets, and connectors can significantly increase total project cost.

Bulk Orders: Purchasing in larger quantities can reduce per-meter cost. Environmental Conditions: Outdoor, coastal, or chemical plant installations may require corrosion-resistant materials, increasing cost.

Cost-

Saving Tips

Opt for pre-galvanized steel in non-corrosive indoor environments. Consider perforated trays instead of ladder trays if weight capacity allows, saving up to 15% or more. Buy in bulk and negotiate long-term supply contracts to reduce unit costs.

Plan installation during off-peak construction seasons to take advantage of lower labor rates. In summary, for a standard trapezoidal cable tray, expect $10–$30 per meter for steel and $20–$50 per meter for aluminum, with higher costs for stainless steel or specialized coatings. Installation and environmental factors can further influence the total project cost.
