Key Takeaways

Electrical distribution boxes in Western Europe typically range from €0. 50 to €500+ depending on type, capacity, and features.

Pricing Overview

Standard residential and small commercial boxes: Basic wall-mounted or flush-mounted boxes start around €0. 50 to €50, suitable for light-duty workshop circuits or small installations (thermoplastic or standard metal enclosures). Industrial and heavy-duty boxes: Larger plastic or metal distribution boards with DIN-rail mounting, multiple circuits, and IP40–IP65 protection typically cost €50 to €300, depending on the number of modules, ingress protection, and customization options.

High-end or specialized units: Boxes with advanced features such as smart monitoring, remote control, or weather-resistant enclosures for outdoor workshops can exceed €500, particularly for three-phase or high-amperage systems.

Key Factors Affecting Price

Material and durability: Plastic boxes are generally cheaper, while stainless steel or UV-resistant enclosures command higher prices. Capacity and configuration: The number of circuits, modularity, and DIN-rail compatibility influence cost. Ingress protection (IP rating): IP40 for indoor use is standard; IP65 or higher for outdoor or dusty environments increases price.

Compliance and certifications: Boxes meeting IEC 60670, IEC 61439, or REACH standards may have higher upfront costs but ensure safety and regulatory compliance. Customization: Options like transparent doors, semi-transparent hatches, or integration with building management systems can add to the cost.

Supplier Options

Wieland Electric: Offers decentralized, pluggable distribution boxes suitable for workshops and industrial applications, with flexible configurations and compliance with IEC standards.

ELMAR

K Holding: Provides a wide range of plastic and metal distribution boards, including IP40 and IP65-rated units for household and industrial use. Intratec Shop: Offers various IP-rated boxes and accessories for indoor and outdoor installations, suitable for renovation or new workshop setups. Alibaba Europe: Wholesale options for bulk purchases, with prices ranging from €0.

50 to €149 for standard and customizable enclosures.

Recommendation

For Western European workshops, a practical approach is to select IP40–IP65 rated boxes with sufficient modular capacity for current and future circuits. For industrial workshops, consider metal or UV-resistant enclosures with DIN-rail mounting and optional smart monitoring. Bulk purchases or supplier negotiations can reduce per-unit costs, especially for larger projects.
